Encountering God On Campus

By Kimberly Kwon

When I drove the 2058 miles across country from Indianapolis, Indiana to California, I didn't think my life would be as difficult as it has been. I knew adjusting to California freeway traffic and high taxes wouldn't be easy. And, I knew that Fuller Seminary would be filled with academic, practical and spiritual challenges. But, what I've experienced during the past few months — a true sense of refiner's fire — came unexpectedly.

Since I began seminary studies, I have been introduced by others as "the seminary student". I have been challenged to think about what "maturity in Christ" means. I have been reminded of our responsibility to others as examples of Christ. Slowly, as I continued to evaluate my level of faith and walk with Christ, I realized how much more I needed to grow. But, I also began to feel guilty for not being everything I should be, wondering how my outer image (ie. the seminary student) could match my inner self filled with sin. I felt guilty for not knowing enough about the Bible — for being in my eyes, immature. With tears I cried out to God for forgiveness and apologized a million times almost every time I had my quiet time with Him.

Then, two weeks ago, a couple of guest speakers in my Foundations of Christian Formation class spoke about what it meant to have an extended time alone with God. Although many lessons were taught, I will share what pierced my heart the most.

They said this time with God was to be in a place of His grace. A place where, no matter what we have done or failed to do, we can come to the Father and repent and receive His grace with forgiveness. It is a time when we can feel His love for us as a child of God. A place of affirmation of this identity, and complete acceptance.

This time of solitude with God is where we sit still before God and think about who He is. It is a time where God is exalted. It is a time where my words are not important; we don't come with our own agenda. Instead, it is a time to listen.

When I was dismissed from class for the extended time with God, I went swiftly home. I closed the door, turned the lights down, and sat in the tiny hallway outside of my bathroom door. The minute I sat down, I started to cry.

God had been trying to tell me all this time that I am in His presence of grace. Still, even though I could think about this and agree with it theologically, my heart was not in it. I could not allow God's grace to cover me.

God I want to hear you. God, tell me what you want to say to me. I sat and tried to listen. All I could hear was the sound of the birds chirping outside, and the kids playing. I began to sing — music always helps me. But, then I thought, God just wanted me to be silent. So, I sat.

I love you. God, is that you? I love you. It was no audible voice. Just a simple thought running through my mind.

I thought to myself, this is a place and time of grace. I'm sorry for being like a selfish child holding on to something I shouldn't hold onto. But then I thought, there I go again. I'm just saying sorry and feeling the guilt. God began to tell me to just simply thank Him. I thought of a sermon on 1 John, about remembering the first time we fell in love with God.

My pastor reminded us to think of our past, how we were, how God has been there with us and helped us through our trials, and has shaped us.

Although my heart was not completely in it, I began to thank God. God, thank you for your grace. Thank you for providing for me. Thank you for the energy to make it through today ....

Versailles Cuban Restaurant (310) 558-3168 10319 Venice Blvd.

I could have sworn that I saw Ricky Ricardo eating next to me at this place, but the food was so good that just taking my eyes off of the plate was more than I could bear. I'm talking about Versailles Cuban Restaurant in L.A., (yes, I had to get away again) and boy was it worth the trip. I still wake up with a smile on my face remembering the fried plantains, mouth-watering chicken, and delicious black beans I downed a couple of weeks ago with a friend. I remember everything about my trip except that I just can't recollect who the friend was that joined me. In fact, I think he's still there because I don't remember driving anyone home. Well, that's good anyway because that gives me a good excuse to tell my Overeaters Anonymous group why I need to go back. Oh yes, I'll definitely be back because the food is fantastic! And, the place has a real fun atmosphere. Going to dinner here won't cost you a fortune either -- I spent less than ten bucks. Last time I ate in a restaurant this good, they wanted 100 dollars, the mortgage on my house, and my first born. If you want to grab some great Cuban food at a very reasonable price, then trek on down to Versailles and discover a whole new world of cooking. Until next time, may your tummies be happy and your heartburns be few. See ya in the SEMI!

The Nightmare Before Christmas

GARRETT SAYS:

AN EXCELLENT DIVERSION!

The Nightmare Before Christmas is a holiday movie that has nothing like it in today's popular culture, and before I say anything else about it, let me say that it is about time! After all, the illusionists of Hollywood has failed utterly to give the public the Autumnal equivalent of It's a Wonderful Life. The best they seem to be able to make are cheap flicks about masked serial stalkers of teen-age girls and Clive Barker bloodfests.

Nightmare Before Christmas is a Holiday movie about Halloween, with Christmas as a special guest star. And this combination not only emphasizes the difference between the two American pastimes, but it also celebrates the qualities of each in entirely entertaining ways.

You see, there are many different holidays, and every holi-day has a town of entities who bring those festivities to their human hosts once a year. So there is an Eastertown, and a Christmastown, and of course, a Halloweentown. The reigning leader of Halloween town is Jack Skellington, the Pumpkin King; and this year, Jack is bored. He feels his creativity is spent, and as most artists would understand, to lose your creativity is to lose your very soul. So Jack wanders aimlessly until he discovers the door to Christmastown, and lo and behold, he discovers something completely new!

While I won't spoil the surprise, I'm sure you can imagine what may happen when a Halloween artist tries to mold Christmas in his image.

Now, the question is, what can we as students of theology and psychology say about a film that not only acknowledges, but celebrates the dark imagination of spirits and goblins and witches?

I have come to the conclusion that it is really no big deal. That is not to say that I feel that the demonic is not something Christians ought to worry about, but the holiday of Halloween should not be equated with demonism. For Americans, Halloween is the holiday of clever disguises and processed sugar and of frightened cries of fear that are always followed by hysterical laughter. We love to be scared, and we love to dress up and feed our fantasies. And as Stuart Smalley would say, "And that's okay."

Nightmare Before Christmas celebrates this part of the year with all the innocence of an eight year-old. The denizens of Halloweentown are creepy, but they are also loveable and worthy of love. They love a good fright, as do we all, and they are proud of their annual celebration.

In the same way, Christmastown is presented with the same warmth of the season (however secularized and Americanized it may be) that we experienced as children. And it is this innocence that has touched Jack's heart and warmed it in a way that was completely new to him.

It does not rid him of his halloween spirit as if it were evil, but the Christmas spirit complements it, enlarges his view of life. Of course, in Jack's search to understand the logic of Christmas, to break it down into its components and study it, he loses its essence and misunderstands its soul.

And sometimes I think this is what we have done ourselves, as well. We

The Lord led me to Psalm 145:

*I will exalt you, my God and King.
Every day I will praise you and extol your name forever and ever. Great is the Lord most worthy of praise... The Lord is gracious and compassionate, slow to anger and rich in love... He has compassion on all. He has made... The Lord is faithful to all his promises and loving toward all. He has made ... My mouth will speak in praise of the Lord (NIV).*

Everyone focuses on the grace of God that saves you. That night, I was reminded that it is also the grace of God that helps you as you walk with Him. I was reminded that our God, even when we are unfaithful to Him, is faithful to us to lift us up when we fall down.

Nightmare

Christians ask ourselves about meaning, and we ask ourselves what is the source of Halloween, and where is Christ in Christmas. To our children, those answers don't matter. They want, and they deserve, to celebrate the spirit of the seasons—the dionysian indulgence of Halloween and the merry splendor of Christmas.

I recommend this movie for older children and adults—for those who love Halloween or want to recapture the joy of Halloween, and for those who have never understood Halloween and seek to discover why Americans love their ghosts and ghoulies so much.

FIELD EDUCATION

MINISTRY ENRICHMENT SEMINAR DEVELOPING CHURCH BUDGETS

One of the realities of Christian ministry is the management of moneys which under gird ministry. Many ministers are required to prepare and manage budgets. How do you put a budget together? What are the assumptions upon which you construct a budget?
How do you manage the budget throughout the year? These important questions will be addressed by Dr. Pat Lattore on Monday, November 1, 1993 from 4:30-5:30 p.m. in Payton 101. For more was a paradigm shifter, and how Evergreen Baptist Church has shifted its evangelism in order to reach more unchurched, skeptical, Americanized Asian-Americans. Rev. Dr. Ken Fong will present this seminar on Thursday,

It's week six. Has the newness of the year begun to wear off for you like it has for me? Six weeks is enough time for me to have had a few misunderstandings, awkward interactions and cases of hurt feelings with some of the people I was so excited to see back in September. You discover that there are people here who I just don't seem to click with. The temptation for me is to want to chart a wide course around them when I see them coming toward me across the Garth. But it's then when I need to remind myself that avoidance and reconciliation are incompatible, and that, regardless of how I feel at the moment, these people are part of the family God has given me at Fuller. To avoid them forever would mean to miss out on some of the potential blessings God may be able to share with me through them. Can you relate at all? Here's a quote by Eugene Peterson which seems appropriate for our lives together here at Fuller:

"All actual life is encounter"

—Martin Buber

"...just because we are a family of faith does not mean that we are one big happy family. The people we encounter as brothers and sisters in faith are not always nice people.

They do not stop being sinners the moment they begin believing in Christ... Some of them are cranky, some of them dull and others (if the truth must be spoken) a drag. But, at the same time, our Lord tells us that they are brothers and sisters in faith. If God is my father, then this is my family.

So the question is not, "Am I going to be a part of a community of faith?" But, "How am I going to live in this community of faith?" ...Important in any community of faith is an ever-renewed sense of expectation in what God is doing with our brothers and sisters in the faith... A community of faith flourishes when we view each other with this expectancy, wondering what God will do today in this one, in that one. When we are in a community with those Christ loves and redeems, we are constantly finding out new things about them. They are new persons each morning, endless in their possibilities. We explore the fascinating depths of their friendship and share the secrets of their quest. It is impossible to be bored in such a community..."

—Ellen Barbour

Let's Take Time To Celebrate

This coming Sunday night and all day Monday, there's going to be quite a celebration. And why shouldn't there be? It's not every day that a seminary celebrates the inauguration of its President, especially since the last one was some thirty years ago.

On the Sunday night at Lake Ave. Congregational Church, the renowned preacher Dr. James Earl Massey will be bringing the message entitled, "The Lord is Good." The focus of the evening will be one of thanksgiving for God's goodness with choirs from the African-American, Hispanic and Korean communities leading in the rejoicing. It will be a wonderful festival of praise.

Then on the Monday, we are again all invited to participate in the actual installation ceremony at First Methodist Church on Colorado, followed by the free "Lavish Long Lunch on the Lawn." At the luncheon there's going to be a carnival atmosphere with a Dixieland band and various entertainers mingling amongst the crowd.

All classes are canceled on the Monday, mid-term exams are over, and there are no excuses for you not to come and have some fun. You've worked hard this quarter. Take a break and help celebrate this unique time in Fuller's history. I look forward to seeing you there!

Warm regards in Christ,
Rob Gallagher.

ENJOYING THE GIFT OF SEX

Dr. Clifford and Joyce Penner are offering a seminar on "Enjoying The Gift of Sex" on November 12 and 13, 1993. This event is co-sponsored by Continuing Education, The Psychological Center, and The Office of Christian Community. The Penners are nationally known therapists. They bring a firm Christian commitment, care, concern, and creativity to the subject of enriching marriages through a distinctly Christian approach to sexuality. Cliff is a member of Fuller's Board of Trustees. In their wish to serve the Fuller community, Fuller students and their spouses receive a generous discount. Fuller faculty, staff, and administration and their spouses also receive a substantial discount. Don't miss this rare and significant marital enriching opportunity on our campus. For additional information call (818) 584-5338 or (800) 235-2222 x 5338.
